this morning on a strong opening, or that before noon the level generally should have declined. It is one of the well-understood maxims of the professionals that after a strong closing of a week a good opening on Monday is a good time to sell stocks. The reasons given for the selling tractive; that London was a seller of American securities this morning; that there is likely to be a cut in the price of copper; that the Steel pool has been dissolved-half a dozen other suggestions of a like nature might be mentioned. But there is no good reason why anyone ex-

The outlook in the financial market i that there may be some small shipments of gold to Paris or Berlin this week discount rate on Thursday to 4 per cent to prevent further drains. This is very likely to result in shipments from this side o those centres. But this is at worst; emporary matter and if cotton shipmens become larger quickly it is even possible that there will be an outflow of gold there is nothing bad in the financial situation, nothing to cause uneasiness.

The copper stories were much talked in the Street this morning. The statemen that the price of copper will be reduce to 15 cents a pound, or even lower, i heard in all quarters, and as it is ac

The Steel issues were both weak, the preferred getting to 30 and a fraction. The continued selling of these securities recalls a story of last Saturday that the pool in the stocks has been dissolved and that they will be allowed to take care of themselves for a time at least. There is no other reason for believing the story and some people do not believe that Mr. Keene has parted company with Mr. Morgan in the slightest degree. If the stocks reach any lower level there will be good buying by careful market people as the outlook for the company is excellent.

There was nothing new in the North ern Pacific matter this morning, but it is generally believed that there may be b generally believed that there may be be-fore the week is over. Mr. Morgan is ir New York. St. Paul and Union Pacific were among the strongest stocks in the list this morning.

that I have been brought here and allowed my freedom."

The unfortunate girl resumed her work. There were tears in her eyes, and she seemed to realize what a desolate waste confronted her in life. "What am I going to do? Why, Mrs. Curtis, who represents the Society for the Prevention of Crueity to Children, has been here and told me that she hopes to get me a place in some family where I can work and feel free. I am feeling hopeful that I may take up life even at this late day and be something in the world."

Superintendent Pierce, of the Richmond County Poor House, sighed as he turned away from the young woman, saying. "That's the most pittful case I ever had."

He Was Answered.

(From the New York Times.)

Early in his career as a missionary to the Indians the late Bishop Whipple lad journeyed into the Indian country to preach a sermon to the assembled Chippewas in Chief Good Thunder's witlage. Bishop Whipple had with his the costly garments of his office which he wore of such occasions, and it became necessary to leavinen unguarded in the chief's tepee. It seem that the Bishop had his doubts at that time as the inherent honesty of the average Indian. Before leaving he asked, turning to Good Thunder. "Chief, do you think it will be safe to leave them here?"

All the while I Mary Lake, the young woman who has just been rescued from the Asylum for Y., laid aside her embroidery work Satday afternoon on the veranda of the Staten Island Almshouse and sighed sorrowfully. "It all seems like a night-mare to me," she went on, "and I can "You see, I was only ten years old when I was taken away from our dingy little home on the Old Town Road, on Staten Island. I don't even know the name of "One night two big policemen called at ur house and asked for my father. They aid he was wanted for some crime. I told them I knew nothing about him, and my little sisters were afraid to say where he had gone. The next thing I knew the an eaught my father and sent him wer to Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, who lived ear Tottenville, but I only stayed there short time before I was sent to the asyum for feeble-minded children at Syra hildren's asylum who was kind to me. He ras criticised for this. I heard afterward rom inmates of the Newark Asylum who self, if he had got on horseback, the great majority of the battalions of Paris would have declared for him. But he preferred to go to the National Assembly." So wrote Earharoux in his Memoires.

But whether this be so or not, the course taken was the death warrant of his foreign bodyguard—"the stanch red Swiss," as Carlyle calls them—who were left in the chateau without definite orders and with the Marseilles mob through the Porte Royale to its very doors. At first the Swiss seemed to have hoped that there would have been no conflict. The National Guard were joining through the great stone of dispersing, and they themselves flung down cartridges to those below in sign of amity. But by and by, as the crowd surged into the vestibule itself, a collision became inevitable. A shot from the palace was answered by cannon from the Place du Carrousel, and the Swiss, ranged in serried ranks upon the great stuirease, were ordered by their officers to fire. The result was to strew the packed Cour Royale with dead and dying and to drive the assailants in disorder to the faubourgs. Thereupon the Swiss made a sortle under Colonel Pfyfier and seized four cannon, while another detachment under Salis-Zizers seized three more.

They then joined forces in the Place du Carrousel, and volleying on all sides did terrible destruction. Afterward they retried upon the palace, which they continued to defend, behaving with such steadiness and heroism that once Napoleon Bonaparte, snugly ensconced in a friendly by shop and keenly scrutinizing the course of events, was of opinion that they would have been victorious if properly led. But he conflict had terribed the Assembly, he King's order came to cease firing, and their doom was scaled. Very few then meaged must have casped. Some, dynamical prisoners, were bucherton on the way to the Hotel de Ville. Not a few stream of the conflict had terribed the Assembly; he King's order came to cease firing, and their doom was scaled. Very few then meaged must have captured to the rock at Lurre after
